WELCOME TO OUR NEW BYONIK CLINIC IN BIRMINGHAM

Andy is regarded as an expert within the industry amongst his clients and fellow skincare professionals. He is also a member of the British Association Beauty Therapy and Cosmetology.

“When I first heard the news that all clinics were to close due to the coronavirus outbreak, my initial thought was that it may not have been great timing just taking on a new device a week before lockdown. However after a little more thought, it’s actually perfect timing. As I’m going to rely on my Byonik more so than any of my other treatments when I reopen. Now more than ever our clients are going to need therapeutic, non-invasive and non-wounding treatments that support skin function and repair. With all the additional emotional and psychological stress and anxieties that our clients are facing, their skin will surely be bearing some of the impact. With oxidative stress and weakened skin immunity, which plays a vital role in wound healing and repair. So it surely wouldn't then be best to put that skin under additional stress on the skin with chemical peels or micro-needling etc.

The Byonik will be the perfect treatment and first choice for my clients post-coronavirus reopening. Not only does it rejuvenate and repair the skin on a cellular level, without inducing wounding, but with the addition of the pulse-triggered transmembrane convection, being able to intracellularly infuse antioxidants and vitamins to support cell function. The treatment itself also has therapeutic benefits, meaning we are able to bring the 'therapy' aspect back into the treatment at a time when our clients are feeling more stressed, yet not have to compromise on a results-driven treatment. The fact there is no downtime or recovery time, is also a huge bonus. After weeks / months of being in isolation, who wants another 3-7 days stuck indoors recovering from a facial?"— Andy Millward
